Top Man for High Risk Confined Spaces (Non Entrant)

The based 6150-54 course from City and Guilds is an ideal choice if you are someone who works in a top man role in a high risk confined environment.

The training provides comprehensive learning on all aspects of this particular role and provides proof of competence in working in high risk environments via the qualification certificate. The course is delivered by industry professionals using all necessary equipment for the task. Training is valid for three years.

Who is the Course Suitable For?

The top man role in high risk confined space environments is seen as a higher level to that of a traditional top man, as the risk of the person committed to entering the confined space are doing so because of a specified risk that does exist within the confined space.

Skills, responsibility, competence and awareness of the top man in these situations requires a higher degree of learning and experience. If your work relates to the water industry please see the 6150-14/04. Contact us for details of this course.

What is Covered in the Course?

Anyone who needs to be qualified to deal with emergencies in confined spaces should consider completing this level three course.

As a comprehensive training programme the course deals with all aspects related to the top man role for high risk confined spaces and ensures that learners are taught the importance of following procedure and regulations whilst working within these hazardous environments. Learners are taught then assessed on the following modules:

- Being the safety attendant for teams in the confined space
- Overseeing entry and exit of the confined space to ensure safety
- Monitoring work teams and ensuring safe procedures are followed
- Preparing for any emergency situations
- Dealing with emergency situations
- Behaving appropriately when carrying out top man work in high risk confined spaces
- Using knowledge gained to carry out the task
- Work to regulation standards
